

Robin Taylor: CQG #034

Robin joined the Cranbrook Quilters Guild in 2010. She has been part of a small group of quilters, the 'Sunday Morning Group', hosted by Louise Dunn. Robin distributed Community Quilts from 2013 to 2016 with fellow quilters Pat Skordal (2013-16), Donna Cockwell (2013), and Judy Beaulac (2014).

Robin took up quilting after she retired from teaching. She had been a sewer - making her own clothes and household item. She took a beginning quilters' class taught by Audrey Mackinnon at the Cotton Tree Quilt Shop. On a trip to Disneyland, she had been inspired by the quilts in one of the displays. Robin estimates that she's made 20 to 30 quilts. Some have been exhibited at the Guild's quilt shows. Some were made as gifts or for special occasions and some for donating to the community.

Robin has a designated sewing space for quilting and a small stash organized by colour. She prefers cotton or flannel in blue, green and turquoise tones, and likes coordinated hues and blocks. Batiks are a favourite motif and "pinwheels or anything that looks like it moves", is a favourite pattern. She mostly shops at the local stores past and present - Sew Creative Chalet, Cotton Tree, SugarTown- and some in Lethbridge , AB. Quality fabric is important so that the products last.

She pieces and machine quilts smaller items on her Janome. Larger items she sends to a longarmer for edge-to-edge quilting at a cost of 2-3 cents/square inch. Robin has taken courses in quilting on a domestic machine from fellow guild member, Juananne Wales. For hand-quilting, she has a small commercial, wooden frame.

CQG #034: Kingfisher Blues
 Quiltmaker/Owner: Robin Taylor

Robin joined about 35 guild members who were making this block-of-the-month border sampler that was designed by Dianne Jansson, of Di-Versity Quilting, Pritchard, BC. (see also CQG # 010, #030, and #142). She bought her feature and complementary fabrics in Kalispell, ID, USA. Robin joined the quilt-along because she wanted to learn something new, and choose her favourite colour tones. It took her a year to complete; she found it frustrating because the pattern instructions were difficult to follow.

Kingfisher Blues was longarm quilted by Donna Sheppard, of Donna's Quilting & Designs.
